

Enhancing Learning Power

ELLI (EFFECTIVE LIFELONG LEARNING INVENTORY) and the SEVEN DIMENSIONS OF LEARNING

How do really effective learners learn? How do we become 'Superlearners'?

Learning matters to everyone. Being an effective learner offers great advantages in a world of constant change. The ELLI model of 'learning to learn' is built upon extensive research from the University of Bristol, which has identified Seven Dimensions of Learning and created an extensively validated tool to measure and develop individual 'Learning Power'.

In this practical, one-day workshop you will learn:

- The Seven Dimensions of Learning and how they connect to create Learning Power - including receiving your own ELLI Learning Power Profile
- How to use the Seven Dimensions to create powerful learning environments and programmes that build individual, team and organisational learning capability
- How to use the ELLI profiling tool as the basis for developmental coaching and mentoring conversations
- How to select and create engaging, interactive learning activities that strengthen the learning dimensions

Tell me about the workshop....

The open workshop is a full-day training (0900 -1700) for a group of between 12-24 learners.

Your programme fee includes a personal ELLI profile for each participant, and ELLI support materials to enable you to begin to use the principles of ELLI within your own facilitation, coaching, training or consultancy work.

Who should come to the workshop?

This open workshop is intended for learning and development professionals, coaches, facilitators and consultants who are responsible for supporting the learning and development of others. You will learn:

- How to structure coaching conversations and practise your 'coaching for learning' skills under the expert guidance of a skilled ELLI facilitator
- How to design and deliver more powerful learning events and interventions
- How ELLI can be used to measure the progress of individual learners and to evaluate the success of your learning delivery

What additional benefits can I expect?

Participants will also have the opportunity to find out more about ELLI Accreditation and explore its potential value in their future work. For those interested, this workshop equates to Day 1 of a full ELLI Accreditation, which gives access to individual profiles, permission to use the methodology in commercial work and support in introducing ELLI projects, including training 'ELLI Champions' in their own client organisations.
